LANIER MANSION STATE HISTORIC SITE MANAGER DEREK PECK

Lanier site's Peck, 30, stricken ill during concert, dies

BY BOB DEMAREE

Derek Peck, site manager at the Lanier Mansion State Historic Site in Madison since January, was stricken ill during a concert there on Sunday and died unexpectedly.

During the 2021 Music at the Mansion kickoff event at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Peck reportedly introduced the band "Trauma Illinois" and then collapsed inside the nearby Visitors Center as the concert continued. An ambulance was dispatched to the scene and he was transported to King's Daughters' Hospital on Madison's hilltop where he later died.

His mother, Rebecca Peck, posted on her Facebook page that it was initially believed that Peck, 30, had suffered a heart attack, but that the coroner has since suspected a possible pulmonary embolism.

Hanover council awaits decision on parks grant

BY BOB DEMAREE

Hanover Town Council's efforts to revive the city's parks has taken another step forward with the announcement at Tuesday's Hanover Park Board meeting that an application has been successfully submitted for a Land-Water Conservation Fund Grant and is now awaiting a decision on approval.

Park Board Chairman Don Server said the request, submitted June 1, was for $239,331 to be matched by the town, bringing the total to $478,662, if the grant is awarded. The federally funded grant is administered for Indiana by the Department of Natural Resources.

"We will keep our fingers crossed," Server said.

Sever hopes Hanover Town Park will be awarded the fund. He led the town's effort to update its five-year plan submitted earlier this year to increase the odds of that happening.

The application is currently under review as the state evaluates, rates and ranks projects with an announcement on state

SR 101 extension to impact region, says Gov. Holcomb

A map of the general area being proposed for a State Road 101 extention from Markland Dam on the Indiana-Kentucky border to US 50 near Milan. The route would connect I-74 in Indiana with I-71 in Kentucky and provide another cross-river route for freight traffic at Markland Dam Bridge.

INDOT

'We're at the start of something pretty special'

BY BOB DEMAREE

The exact route is not yet known and the timing for construction is still to be determined, but there is one certainty, and that is the State of Indiana has committed $200 million to extend State Road 101 from US 50 to the Ohio River in Switzerland, Ohio and Dearborn counties.

In a phone interview Tuesday morning, Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb said the process of developing the extension "begins right now with the (Indiana) Department of Transportation and with the local communities. There will be a lot of public input, and studying the exact and right route, then getting to the design. Usually the hard part is finding the money, and because of our economy, we found the money, and have committed it to State Road 101."

The State Road 101 extension is one that's been talked about for years and has a long history. Jon Bond, president of the Switzerland County Economic Development Corporation, said INDOT had done

Plan Commission approves expansion of Aldi, other business applications

BY BOB DEMAREE

Madison Plan Commission approved a proposal for the expansion of a hilltop grocery Monday night among several applications involving local businesses.

Aldi grocery, 202 Franks Drive, requested a setback for a proposed 5,060 square foot expansion. Aaron Hurt, of Civil and Environmental Consultants Inc., Indianapolis, said Aldi wants to expand the building on the south side while also renovating the building.

Plan Commission President Darrell Henderson noted the proposal for a 21.1-foot setback on the north lot line, an 85-foot setback on the east lot line, a 115-foot setback on the south lot line, and a 114-foot setback on the west lot line "was well within our normal regulation on lot lines" prior to the commission unanimously approving the application.

Hurt said efforts will be made "for the most part" to keep Aldi open during the expansion. "I think there will have to be some closures but generally speaking they are going to try to keep it open for the most part for as long as possible," he said.

Marissa Simback carries her purchases from the Aldi grocery on Madison's hilltop Tuesday. The 13,140-square-foot store sought and received Madison Plan Commission approval Monday for a 5,060-square-foot expansion on its south side. The store, located at 202 Franks Drive, sits on about 3 acres.

In other applications, the Commission:

• Reviewed an request by Justin McGillan of McGillan Holdings related to parking at the former Victoria Inn, 801 East Main Street, and accepted a motion to allow parallel parking on the west side of the building and angled parking on the east side with two handicap spaces.

There was some concern voiced by nearby residents about angled parking along Roosevelt Avenue, but they support improvements to the structure overall, which will 14 apartments on upper floors and a cart rental business in the basement.

"I'm afraid of the angled parked" because of how it impacts traffic that goes through there, said Beverly Armstrong, 717 East Main Street. "There's more traffic on Roosevelt than you would imagine.

"I am so happy with the improvements to that building. I don't want to hamper him from doing whatever he wants to do with that building," she added.

• Approved an application for setbacks from Mike Kolenz of K4 Architecture of Cincinnati, representing First Financial Bank, which is planning interior and exterior renovation of its branch at 501 Clifty Drive.

• Approved an application from Bill Pettit of Pettit and Associates for the development of a seven-lot subdivision at 1010, 1016, 1022 and 1030 East First Street just north of Fillmore Street with changes to the water and sewer line as directed by the city, and to file for variance with the Board of Zoning Appeals in regards to sidewalks and curbs. The property, owned by Bernard Johnson and Anthony Hammock, will be subdivided into seven building lots for single family homes.

• Approved an application from Mark Prickett to amend the final plat to split a parcel into two separate parcels at 707 Walnut Street, allowing the creation of possibly another residence off Gerry Lane, the alley behind there.

• Approved an application from El Nopalito, 327 Clifty Drive, for setbacks that would allow for the construction of a patio at the restaurant.

Madison BZA OKs applications

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison's Board of Zoning Appeals approved a conditional use permit for a property owner to locate a double-wide manufactured home in the city's 2-mile buffer zone but not before one board member recused himself from the decision in order to voice personal concerns about the application.

Corey Perry's application to locate a 2022 Clayton Mobile Home at 1660 North Borcherding Road near Madison met just about every requirement for a conditional use permit — the home is brand new, the lot size is adequate for all setbacks and utilities and there are other similar homes in the area.

Madison's Board of Zoning Appeals approved a parking lot variance for Justin McGillan of McGillan Holdings, who is rehabilitating the former Victoria Inn, 801 East Main Street, to include 14 apartments on the top two floors and a cart rental business in the basement.

However, Board member Rick Farris, who lives at 1310 North Borcherding Road, said Perry's past performance as a neighbor left much to be desired.

"The applicant has provided false information in the past," Farris said. "The property was not harmonious with the neighborhood."

Farris said Perry allowed his property to become a dumping ground for junk cars and trucks and old tires to where it "looked like an auto salvage yard."

Perry apologized for the previous condition of his 2.13-acre site and noted the situation Farris described was generated by a family member during a back injury that prevented Corey Perry from attending to the neglectful conditions.

"I was injured and my brother took advantage of me," Perry said. "Once I got healed in March, I got it cleaned up ... are you satisfied with the lot now?"

Farris agreed that conditions were recently much better at the property and that if Perry continues to keep it that way he would have no issue with him as a neighbor.

In the past Perry has not lived at the site, but he noted that he has sold his current home on Duffy Avenue and will be relocating to Borcherding Road in the future with plans of being a good neighbor.

The remaining three members of the BZA approved the application unanimously for a five-year period.

In other business, the board:

• Tabled a review of the BZA's rules and procedures to give new member Darrell Henderson time to review the lengthy document prior to additional discussion and a vote.

• Approved a parking lot variance for Justin McGillan of McGillan Holdings, who is rehabilitating the former Victoria Inn, 801 East Main Street, to include 14 apartments on the top two floors and a cart rental business in the basement.

The application allows the complex to provide about one-half the number of parking spaces normally required for 14 apartments but a similar amount to what the structure used to offer when it was a 26-room hotel.

• Approved a request by Jerry Owens to rebuild a garage at 1209 West Main Street on the same footprint as a previous garage that collapsed during a snowstorm.

• Approved a request by Lisa Cutshall to construct a 10-foot addition and deck on the rear of a shared wall duplex at 907 and 909 West Second Street. The additions will replace a portion of the structures that was demolished as unrestorable during a current renovation.

• Approved a list of application renewals in which the property owners have paid all fees and in which no complaints were received and approved sending notice to property owners who have not paid fees or responded to BZA inquiries.

PECK

On Wednesday, the Lanier Mansion Facebook page and many of its patrons mourned Peck's passing.

"If you had the pleasure of interacting with Derek, you understand what an impact he had on the site, each of us and on the legacy of the Lanier Mansion," the post noted.

Rebecca Peck also posted a comment thanking the Lanier Mansion and Indiana State Historical Staff and "the wonderful people in the city of Madison for being so gracious and supportive, not just in our son's passing but in the incredible life environment you surrounded him with. He was so truly happy and excited to be partnering with you in your rich history and found a cherished home in Madison."

At the time of his hiring in January, Peck noted the Lanier was a "gorgeous home in a gorgeous town" and the opportunity "blends all of my previous experiences."

Formerly of Columbia, Tennessee, Peck had worked as a historical interpreter and reclamation guide in Tennessee and Mississippi along with historical sites such as the Hoover Dam and Redwood National Park. He and his wife, Devan, have two children, Talayeh, 4, and Remington, 2.

Local arrangements are being handled by Morgan & Nay Funeral Centre in Madison with funeral arrangements in Columbia by Williams Funeral Home & Crematory there. A partial obituary is published in today's edition.

HOLCOMB

a study in 2001-2002, and "there had been discussions before that." Bond noted the possibilities for a State Road 101 extension "has taken a lot of forms" but after all the years of talking about it, most "didn't see it happening."

"This is exciting news," he said, noting Friday's announcement came as a surprise.

Holcomb said he got the same reaction when announcements were made for other infrastructure projects — improvements to US 231 in Dubois and Martin counties and an approach to the I-69 Ohio River crossing near Evansville.

"We have been talking to a lot of people in the communities," Holcomb said, noting the message he got was 'We've been talking about this for 20 years. We've been talking about this for 50 years" and they're "kind of out-doing each other" in how long they've been wanting these improvements to happen.

"They have always been a priority but fortunately with our economy we have the ability now to expand our priority list and move cash into areas of need," the governor said. "So it's no longer rhetoric or talked about but the work begins and we roll our sleeves up, study and work with the local officials, citizens of each of those three counties, Dearborn, Ohio and Switzerland. Design and then build. We're at the start of something pretty special."

The 25-mile State Road 101 extension will provide direct connections for Dearborn, Ohio and Switzerland counties to both I-71 in Kentucky and I-74 in Indiana and offer a new cross-river route for freight traffic through southeastern Indiana. The project will connect with the existing portion of the highway at US 50 near Milan and at the Ohio River crossing at Markland Dam in Switzerland County.

Holcomb said the project is "huge not just for those three counties, but also to Jefferson County, and the rest of the state. It's going to be good for 92 counties to better connect one of the most beautiful regions of our state. Again, long time coming, but everything rests on our infrastructure and we can't rest on our laurels."

In 2019, CNBC ranked Indiana's infrastructure as No. 1 in the nation, but even with that distinction, Holcomb it's "never-ending work" to continue to make the state's infrastructure even stronger. He said the State Road 101 extension is significant to moving Indiana forward in not just what it represents for Jefferson, Switzerland, Ohio and Dearborn counties, "but the whole stretch along the Ohio River."

Holcomb said there are "other pieces of the puzzle to snap together in terms of connecting to people and to markets. Roads obviously are critical. Riverport traffic is obviously critical. Broadband Internet is obviously critical. This past legislative session, in addition to recognizing we had the funds to do 101, we also devoted $250 million to broadband Internet grants for communities. So this is a massive opportunity for local communities to develop and to determine their destiny. That's what this is all about is the state partnering with local communities to accent and develop in many cases in ways like they have never been able to with the assets that are already in place."

Holcomb said "the big goal" is to build a stronger state by bringing regions together, which is what the state is doing through a $500 million Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative in which each of 10 regions can be awarded up to $50 million.

He said it's about communities "thinking about bigger than self and thinking of the whole region. When I am trying recruit a company to Indiana, or a company like Grote is looking to grow, they have to attract a workforce, and it's not just inside the Madison city limits or the Jefferson County line, it is a region."

He said Indiana "cannot have lines artificially restrict our growth. That requires working together" with the state also participating by providing funding and expertise to assist the communities.

"Whether it has to do with infant mortality or building roads or broadband Internet, we're in this together. We're stronger together," Holcomb said. "We have lived that this past year (in getting through the COVID-19 pandemic), and that's become obvious, but this is a time of real excitement and building one Indiana in all 92 counties. It's an exciting time to be a Hoosier."

Jefferson County is actively involved with Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Corporation that also includes Scott, Washington, Clark and Floyd counties. Meanwhile, Bond said Switzerland County has been working closely with Ohio, Ripley and Franklin counties toward forming a region where those counties can work together.

Holcomb said the state wants to support "projects that will enhance our efforts to attract, retain and recruit people to the state of Indiana." He said that goes beyond road investments, and includes cultural aspects to enhance communities.

"That's why we are encouraging people to not just look at the road investments but to be thinking of how we develop our communities into what they want it to be," said Holcomb, citing the work being done by Mayor Bob Courtney in Madison.

"We're partnering with him as well" Holcomb said, citing regional airports, water sports, broadband Internet, trails and housing as a way to get "all those pieces to snap together" for communities throughout the state.

"We're making sure when people are coming here that their house is ready to show because you never know. You've got the Regatta coming around the corner. In a few days you're going to have thousands of people there, and they're going to be looking around saying, 'I love this place.'

"Just think about what another couple of hundred million can do for that region," he said, "We're able to then share with the rest of the world. Once we get people to Indiana, they like to stay."

approvals scheduled for the fall followed by efforts in the following months to submit a final application for federal approval.

Meanwhile, the Community Park is becoming an active place once again, and getting more use than it has in many years, but that's quickly filling the parking lot.

Parks Director Scott Davidson noted at Tuesday's meeting that it's becoming a challenge for people to find places to park because of all of the activities ongoing.

"We need to start getting creative on some of our parking," he said.

Hanover Town Council President Kenny Garrett said the issue is likely to continue at least a couple of more years as town works toward additional funding for park.

In other Park Board business:

• Davidson reported baseball and softball season is going well with teams now totaling 31. He said most leagues will conclude play before July 4.

• Herd a report on concessions sales that showed revenue was $1,795.25 after the first three weeks. "We won't break even" this year, said Davidson, noting equipment purchases to get the concession operations going this year will limit profits, but he anticipates that concessions will be profitable in the future.

• Town Clerk/Treasurer Keith Mefford reported a net profit of $2,330 from a music festival at the amphitheater on May 29 despite "not that great of a turnout." He is hopeful of attracting a bigger attendance at the next concert on July 31.

• Discussed an issue with motorized vehicles, such as mopeds and golf carts, on the park property that could present a safety issue for pedestrians. Garrett suggested posting the park with signs prohibiting those types of motorized vehicles while providing allowances for motorized wheelchairs.

• Reported there will be a soccer clinic June 22-24 from 9 -11 a.m., at the Hanover Park. Cost is $25. The clinic is designed for children four years old through middle school. Call Davidson at 812-806-1042 or 812-292-4282, or Nancy Totten at 812-701-3708 for details. Davidson said there are also plans for a fall soccer league.

Mayor announces 4-member Golf Board

Mayor Bob Courtney announced Wednesday his appointments to the city's newly established Madison Golf Board.

Creation of the Golf Board was unanimously approved during the Parks and Recreation Board's public meeting on June 7. The new panel will work with the city's golf professional to institute policies and directives for the day-to-day operations of Sunrise Golf Course as well as establish strategies to expand the sport of golf locally.

Those named to the Golf Board include Zach Laughlin, serving as the Parks Board representative, and Kenton Williams, Kathy Crafton and Karl Eaglin, representing the golf community.

"The formation of this board provides the city Parks and Recreation Board the opportunity to refocus their attention on the many assets and programs in our parks department while still ensuring our new golf professional has a support system for advice and new ideas," said Courtney.

The four-member board will serve as a liaison between the citizens of Madison and the Parks and Recreation Board and advise and support new PGA Professional Roger Gallatin Jr. and will work with him to market Sunrise Golf Course and expand on the course's offerings.

Those named to the Golf Board include Zach Laughlin, serving as the Parks Board representative, and Kenton Williams, Kathy Crafton and Karl Eaglin, representing the golf community.

"Sunrise Golf Course is a special place and an important recreational asset to our community. I look forward to working alongside the other members of the board to advance golf in Madison for current and future golfers," said Williams.

The Golf Board will hold an organizational meeting after Gallatin joins the city staff on Sunday, June 20.

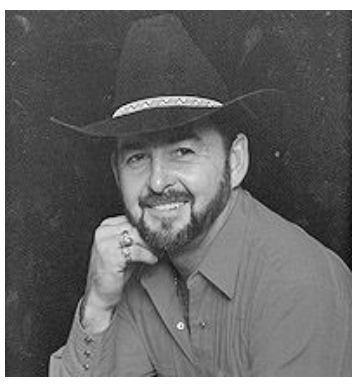
Let Us Pause To Honor The Memory Of

Mr. Randall Lee Culver, Sr.



Mr. Randall Lee Culver, Sr., age 70, of Madison, Indiana entered this life on October 2, 1950 in Madison, Indiana. He was the son of the late James William Sr. and Norma Wise Culver. He was raised in Madison and attended school there. He was of the Christian faith and his favorite hymn was, "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder". He was united in marriage on March 1, 1969 in Madison, Indiana to Eva Kathleen Liter by the Rev. Ted Kaiser. This union of eight years was blessed with daughters, Marcie Kim and Ginger Kay and sons, Randall Lee, Jr. and Rodney King. He had worked for Jim Shake in downtown Madison with the barge industry. He moved to Marion, Indiana and had worked for the International Union of Operating Engineers and had worked for J & J Erectors in Marion as a crane operator. He moved back to Jefferson County near Chelsea and resided there until 2009 when he moved to Madison. He enjoyed being a mechanic, fixing, tinkering, and enjoyed going out to the old diners. He loved to dive and always wanted to live in Maui, Hawaii. Randy had a very inventive nature and had hoped to gain a patent. Randall died on Saturday, June 5, 2021, at his home in Madison, Indiana.

A LOVING FAMILY

RANDALL'S WISHES

Randall chose cremation and his ashes to be scattered in Maui.

Sharing as an access to happiness, connection

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: Lately, I find myself thinking a lot about old roommates, friends and co-workers. I'm talking about people from over 30 years ago, whom I haven't spoken to in decades. I think I would like to tell them how they have impacted my life in positive ways. Should I reach out to them or would that just be self-serving and weird? I mean, if I were to reach out, I'm not sure what the follow-up would be: "Nice catching up with you, goodbye forever"?

Tell me, Annie. Is this sort of feeling normal as we age, and should I act on it or just forget about it? — Too Much Time to Think

Dear Too Much: Reminiscing more with age is not only common; it can be hugely beneficial, provided it's positive/productive in nature, which yours is. A 2016 study of 47 people living in senior care facilities found that after sharing memories, family history and personal accomplishments, participants experienced fewer feelings of loneliness and depression. So, keep taking those laps around Memory Lane.

And to the question of whether or not you should reach out to these old friends and acquaintances, my answer is a resounding yes! Too often it's not until after people are gone that we express how much they meant to us. Drop them a line today. Let them know you've been thinking of them lately and that you're glad for the time you knew them. There's a good chance you'll make their day.

Dear Annie: I've been friends with "Remy" for six years. We both play the same computer game on the same platform, and we always enjoy chatting as we play. A little over a year ago, I was single and found myself developing feelings for Remy. We'd always just been friends, but gradually, an attraction grew. Before I knew what was happening, we both found ourselves falling in love. We have so many similarities and shared interests. It's so easy to talk to each other. It's been over a year of our sharing this intense, romantic connection.

But there's a catch. I knew that she was technically married and had a kid, but I always thought that she was separated from her husband. It turned out that wasn't the case. She insists she's going to separate from him, though, and is just waiting for her new house to be done so that she can move. Meanwhile, I'm in limbo, not knowing what's going to happen.

Annie, what do you do when the woman you love is unhappily married? She says she loves me and wants to be with me. And I'm so excited to have found someone who connects with me so deeply. Our only clashes come on the weekends when she has to play house and can't write to me. I've mostly been understanding up until now, but it's starting to get a bit frustrating. — Lover in Limbo

Dear Lover: What you call "playing house" is her living her real life. Your digital rendezvous are her playtime — a way for her to escape the day-to-day drudgery, blow off some steam and avoid having to make any substantial changes to her situation. She might not be conscious of the fact that this is what she's doing, but it doesn't make it any more acceptable. The bottom line is that if she were going to leave her husband, she'd have done so already. Pull the plug and free yourself up to connect with a loving, available woman — one you can meet in person.

My money, my problems

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I have been married for 20 years. When my wife and I first married, I was the sole breadwinner. I had a very good job and made a pretty comfortable living. My wife stayed home and raised our children. In 2008, technological advances rendered my line of work obsolete. I had to start over, reinventing myself in another industry. We struggled financially for years; it was difficult and put a strain on our marriage. Today, I have a full-time gig and make decent money, as well as a side business that does OK. My wife has a full-time job and side gig as well, and she makes nearly double what I make.

My problem is this. All the years when I was the sole breadwinner, my salary was "our money." Now that she makes the lion's share, her salary is "her money." She expects me to pay my expenses with my own salary. For instance, I recently had an expensive car repair done. She spotted me the cash, but she wants me to pay her back. Never mind the fact that for a long time my car was our only car, and she put half the miles and wear and tear on it herself.

I just feel like I was taken advantage of — like she has forgotten the sacrifices I made all those years ago. It really makes me resentful. I've mentioned this to her before, and she got better about it for a bit, but now her attitude has reverted back to how it was before I'd mentioned something.

Annie, I am not freeloading. I pay my share. Just sometimes, when a major unexpected expense comes, I need a little help. I don't feel, after all I've done and all we've been through together, that I should have to feel uncomfortable asking for money. What should I do? — Husband to a Forgetful Wife

Dear HTAFW: Attitude adjustments require periodic tune-ups. Gently remind her of your previous conversation and let her know you've noticed the issue cropping up again. She was receptive to your feedback last time; she probably will be this time, too. That is one of the most valuable assets a couple can share: a willingness to hear each other out and try to change accordingly.

And to head off the responses I'll get from people who think a married couple should always pool all their funds together: Yes, it can be difficult to merge lives without merging finances, but it is possible, and more and more couples are choosing to do so. Some have found a good balance with a "yours, mine, ours" approach — sharing one bank account for household expenses and utilities and things like car maintenance, while each maintaining a separate bank account for discretionary spending. You and your wife might consider trying that for greater harmony.

Hanover creating public Wi-Fi hotspot

BY BOB DEMAREE

The new Wi-Fi service established recently for security cameras at Fireman's Park in Hanover will also be made available to the public as a free hotspot.

Community access to Wi-Fi at Fireman's Park, located between East First and East Main streets, will soon be available after the town council approved funding at Tuesday's regular meeting.

The town established Internet at the park for the operation of security cameras in an effort to curb vandalism. However, for the $225 installation charge and a monthly $20 fee for three years, they are also able to provide Wi-Fi in the park through a contract with MicroDome Computers of Madison.

In other business, the town council:

• Heard a report by City Clerk/Treasurer Keith Mefford that with the next round of applications coming up soon for the state's Community Crossings Grant for street paving, there are currently 11 streets not listed in the town's inventory that should be. Mefford is hopeful to get that corrected soon because it impacts what the town receives through that grant program.

• Heard a report by Mefford that work is continuing on new entrance signs to the Community Park. "We should have new designs coming anytime," he said, noting that many of the current signs are faded and difficult to read from plants overgrown. "It's either flowers or signs," he said, and while the flowers may look nice, it's also a matter of being certain the signs can be read.

• Approved the third and final reading of an ordinance that will adjust the speed limit for some town streets from 20 to 30 mph. Streets increasing to 30 mph will be Kuntz Road, Thornton Road, Greenbrier Road, Main Street and Madison Avenue. Also, Main Cross will increase to 30 mph except when school lights are flashing Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. between Aug. 1 and June 1.

• Town Marshall Shane Caldwell updated that a firing range in being located at the bottom of Hanover Beach Hill at the town's sewer treatment plant for use by local law enforcement only.

"We have a great location and it will benefit all law enforcement," Mefford said.

• Town attorney Devon Sharpe announced that a Risk and Resilience Assessment that was earlier thought needed to be done was determined unnecessary, saving the town $7,000 in costs.

• Established July 19-25 as Clean-up Hanover Days with a dumpster available 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily at the town garage on Lowery Lane near Logan's Point.

• Reported that town properties located at 138 Ohio Avenue and 132 Maple are due to be auctioned at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 24.

Prosecutor bringing awareness to issue of elder abuse

DAVID SUTTER
JEFFERSON COUNTY PROSECUTOR

World Elder Abuse Awareness Day is designated in June of each year. This is a day set aside to recognize that some of our most important citizens are vulnerable to abuse, neglect, and exploitation.

Elder abuse impacts not just seniors, but anyone over the age of 18 categorized as an endangered adult. An endangered adult is a person incapable by reason of mental illness, intellectual disability, dementia, habitual drunkenness, excessive drug use, or other physical or mental incapacity of managing or directing the management of the individual's property or providing self-care. The definition also includes a person harmed or threatened with harm due to neglect, battery or exploitation of the individual's personal services or property.

There are multiple crimes that are committed against endangered adults in our State. One such crime is Battery. A battery occurs whenever a person knowingly or intentionally touches an endangered adult in a rude, insolent, or angry manner. The crime increases in severity depending on the injury caused, if any. Another crime often committed against endangered adults is Neglect. Neglect occurs when a caregiver for an endangered adult places the cared-for adult in a situation that threatens the adult's life or health by failing to provide adequate food, clothing, shelter or medical care.

One of the most common crimes committed against endangered adults is Exploitation. Exploitation is committed by a person who knowingly or intentionally exerts unauthorized use of the personal services or the property of an endangered adult for the person's own profit or advantage. According to a 2011 study, older Americans lose a minimum of $2.9 billion annually due to elder financial abuse and exploitation.

There are several well-recognized risk factors for elder abuse by caregivers. The risk factors include: a current diagnosis of a mental health disorder; current abuse of alcohol; high levels of hostility; poor or inadequate preparations or training for caregiving responsibilities; assumption of caregiving responsibility at an early age; inadequate coping skills; exposure to abuse as a child; high financial and emotional dependence upon a vulnerable elder; lack of social support; or lack of formal services such as respite care.

Elder abuse is most often perpetrated by the victim's own family members. Roughly 90% of abusers are family members, most often adult children, or spouses. A 2010 study reported that approximately 11% of the elderly population in the United States had experienced abuse or neglect in the year prior. Despite this high percentage, we know that elder abuse is largely unreported. The National Center on Elder Abuse suggests that only 1 in 14 cases of abuse is actually reported to authorities.

All of this is made more important because elders who experience abuse, neglect, or self-neglect face considerably higher risk of premature death than elders who have not been mistreated. Older adults who are abused or mistreated are three times more likely to die within the next decade than adults in the same age category who are not mistreated.

As your prosecutor, I am working hard every day to protect these vulnerable members of our community. One resource we have in this effort is our Adult Protective Services Unit. In Indiana, prosecutors manage the APS system. My office is engaged daily in the investigation of elder abuse, and in efforts to protect endangered adults through law enforcement actions, court orders, and placement of endangered adults into safe care. We will continue these robust efforts.

As a community, I hope we will take the opportunity provided by this awareness day to be vigilant regarding the safety and well-being of elders and the endangered adults among us. If you suspect abuse, neglect, or exploitation of an endangered adult, please report it to authorities. You may contact my office, or you can call the Indiana APS Hotline at 800-992-6978. In an emergency, you should call 9-1-1.

For more information about Elder Abuse, risk factors, and how to file a report, visit https://www.in.gov/fssa/da/3479.htm.

MADISON COURIER SOFTBALL PLAYER OF THE YEAR

Hard work pays off for Raiders' Ginn

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

The battle of wills that exist between a pitcher and a hitter is not unlike that of a chess match. Each player makes moves in an attempt to outsmart the other and win the battle.

Trimble County's Emma Ginn found herself in such a chess match against Henry County's Grace Adams in the 31st District softball championship game at Carroll County. Adams, possessor of a wicked rise ball and a sub-1.00 ERA, fooled Ginn in their first match-up which resulted in a fly ball to right field that went for an error. In the second at-bat, with Henry leading 4-0, Ginn fouled off five pitches, spoiling three rise balls in which she barely made contact.

Finally, after seven pitches, Ginn got the pitch she was looking for and blasted a two-run home run to deep center field.

"They call it 'choke and poke.' You just choke up and take it. You go with the pitch and if she's not going to give me my pitch, I'm going to have to take hers where I want it to go," Ginn said. "And then she gave me one I wanted."

That home run proved to be the final one of the season for Ginn, who finished a spectacular sophomore season by being named The Madison Courier's Softball Player of the Year.

Ginn's statistics just pop off the page and look more like those on a video game than a high school sophomore. She batted .677 — third-best in the state of Kentucky and 27th nationally — with 15 home runs, 75 RBIs and a 1.376 slugging percentage, the last two of which led the state. She only struck out three times all season and, according the MaxPreps, her .935 on base-base percentage leads the nation.

Those gaudy stats were more than enough to give Ginn the type of reputation that gives opponents a pause. The next time she came to bat against Adams in that district championship game, she was intentionally walked, even though her team trailed 10-2 at the time and there was nobody on base.

"It's not the first time it happened this season and it kind of sucked, but on the other hand it was neat to see that another coach sees the skill and it scares them a little bit," Ginn smiled.

Nina Campbell

Trimble County's Emma Ginn is the Madison Courier Softball Player of the Year.

"She had a phenomenal season but as we told her, she's probably not going to have another season like this one," Trimble County coach Randy Wilson said. "She's getting a reputation and next year I don't think she's going to get anything to hit. But I have no doubt in my mind that if they pitch to her, she'll have just as good if not better stats next year."

Ginn is a three-sport starter at Trimble County — she also plays volleyball and basketball — but softball is her passion and the sport she plays nearly year around. She made the varsity team at Trimble as a seventh grader then bust loose the next season, hitting .517 with three home runs and 36 RBIs as an eighth grader.

After losing her freshman season due to COVID-19 cancellations, she was determined to have a big sophomore campaign and delivered just that.

"I felt a little pressure because I wanted to show people what I could do," Ginn said. "Some people don't understand how much commitment I put in with the travel ball teams and the hard work I put in to do what I think I should be doing."

Nobody sees that hard work more than her teammates and coaches. Wilson said that her work ethic is off the charts and her success is directly attributed to the work that she has put in.

"I knew what kind of player she is and I know how hard she works so really, in a way, we were kind of expecting this sort of season out of her," Wilson said. "Her overall demeanor is fantastic and she's the type of kid you want to be around. She's a leader on the field and her teammates love her. She just puts out great vibes. She's just a great kid."

Trimble County's season ended with that loss to Henry County in the Eighth Region Tournament but Ginn's season is far from over. She plays with Indiana Fusion based out of Clark County and will travel all around the country this summer to compete in tournaments.

As for her future, she has her sights set on playing at the Division I level and even has the recruiting dates circled on her calendar.

"September 30, that's when schools can offer and I can verbally commit. Not that I would commit right away, but I could," Ginn said with a twinkle in her eye. "That's my goal and that's what I want to do. I want to play at that level."

"I see D1 players all the time in my eye, Emma is definitely a D1 player," Wilson said. "She has the work ethic and the skills and she just understands the game. She's a catcher by trade, but she played shortstop this year for us and just took off. She's just a softball player and there is no doubt in my mind that she can play at that level."

Reds score 2 in 10th, beat Brewers

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — The Cincinnati Reds broke open a scoreless game in the 10th inning without the benefit of a hit and held on to beat the Milwaukee Brewers 2-1 on Tuesday night.

Brett Anderson worked seven innings of one-hit ball for Milwaukee and combined with three relievers on a two-hitter, but it all fell apart for Brad Boxberger (2-2) in the 10th.

Boxberger hit Tyler Stephenson with a pitch and walked Joey Votto to load the bases. Then he hit Eugenio Suárez with a pitch to score Nick Castellanos, who started the inning at second base. Stephenson scored on a sacrifice fly by Kyle Farmer.

Boxberger "just didn't have a feel for his changeup," Brewers manager Craig Counsell said. "It wasn't like crisp to the first couple hitters, really, and they got two guys on base."

Cincinnati, which has won five straight and 10 of 12, also was outstanding on the mound. Luis Castillo allowed three hits in seven scoreless innings, and four relievers completed the four-hitter. Lucas Sims (4-1) pitched a scoreless ninth and Amir Garrett got the final out for his third save.

The Brewers' Daniel Robertson had a two-out RBI single in the 10th off Heath Hembree.

"I just feel like tonight we did what it took to grind out a win," Reds manager David Bell said. "It wasn't easy."

The teams combined to strike out 27 times on the day Major League Baseball said it would crack down on pitchers using illegal foreign substances to improve their grip and throw pitches with more spin. Neither team got a runner past second base until the sixth inning.

Castillo came in with the most losses (nine) and highest ERA (6.47) among major league starters but had little trouble with a Brewers lineup that entered Tuesday with the lowest batting average and most strikeouts in the NL. He struck out seven and walked three.

Anderson hasn't won since April 17. He struck out nine and walked one.

"Incredible," Castillo said through a translator. "When two starters are going at each other, battling it out, you hardly ever see it that much anymore."

On Monday, rookie Vladimir Gutiérrez and three relievers combined on a four-hitter with 12 strikeouts to help the Reds trounce the Brewers 10-2 on Monday night for their fourth straight victory.

A different U.S. Open than imagined

TIM DAHLBERG

The spectacular ocean vistas will fill TV screens as usual, along with the obligatory shots of hang gliders prancing above the cliffs of Southern California.

In an era where betting is the rage, there's probably a bookie somewhere who will offer an over/under on the number of times fans at home will be treated to the replay of Tiger Woods rolling in a putt on the final hole to force a playoff at Torrey Pines in 2008.

Aside from that, this is not be the U.S. Open everyone expected just a few months ago. Not even close.

Woods is absent, of course, which changes the dynamic of the storyline probably more than it does the leaderboard. His epic win while playing on a broken leg 13 years ago captivated the country, with productivity plummeting as office workers spent most of a Monday tuned into his playoff with Rocco Mediate.

Thankfully, Woods is still alive after crashing his SUV while speeding on a California highway in February. If he does return to play competitive golf at some time — and that's a big if — it will be a story even more remarkable than the one he fashioned the last time the Open was at Torrey Pines.

But Phil Mickelson is playing in his hometown, something that was in doubt before the USGA gave him a special exemption because, well, he's Phil Mickelson. Turns out Lefty didn't need it, after becoming the first 50-year-old to win a major when he shocked everyone in golf by taking the PGA Championship last month on Kiawah Island.

Strange things can happen in golf, and if further evidence is needed there's two bulked up guys — including the defending champion — engaged in a feud that may not quite fit in the buttoned up sport but is a lot of fun to watch. Brooks Koepka and Bryson DeChambeau insist they're only trying to grow the game but there's bad blood between the two that would be fascinating to watch if they happen to be paired together on Sunday with the Open title at stake.

"I hope on the weekend we can play against each other and compete,' " DeChambeau said. "I think it would be fun and would be great for the game."

Even stranger might be the return of Jon Rahm, who was last seen being escorted off the 18th green at Memorial after building a six-shot lead through three rounds. Rahm's tournament came to an abrupt end when he tested positive for Covid-19, likely costing himself a tournament win and $1.7 million in prize money.

Not only is Rahm back, but bookies have made him the tournament favorite at 9-1 odds. Even better, he says he's now fully vaccinated, meaning there will be no repeat of his exit in Ohio.

"I got it all. I had it, I got the antibodies, got the vaccination," Rahm said. "I feel invincible at this point."

That's a good feeling to have even if you're not the No. 3-ranked player in the world. Rahm is, and he has history at Torrey Pines, winning the Farmers Insurance tournament in 2017 for his first PGA Tour victory.

And if he can shoot a 64 while playing with Covid like he did in the third round of Memorial earlier this month, who knows what's possible in the Open. Rahm certainly had time to think about it as he isolated himself in Arizona after his positive test and missing his parents seeing his young son for the first time.

"It was really easy when you're laying in your bed to go back and forth, what could be in the future, what could have been in the past," Rahm said "A lot of meditation and mindful reading and trying to stay in the present, and within the weird part of saying this is trying to understand what that experience was for and trying to learn from it."

Still, for a lot of fans in San Diego this tournament is all about one man. Mickelson is not only a hometown favorite but showed he can still compete at the highest level by becoming the oldest player to ever win a major in the PGA Championship.

If Mickelson's win at the PGA was a huge feel-good story, imagine what would happen if he finally won an Open after finishing second six times — and did it on a course he grew up playing. It's improbable, for sure, but so was the way he dominated on the weekend at Kiawah Island against players half his age.

"It's a unique opportunity because I've never won a U.S. Open. It's in my backyard. I have a chance to prepare properly, and I wanted to put in the right work," Mickelson said. "So I've kind of shut off all the noise. I've shut off my phone. I've shut off a lot of the other stuff to where I can kind of focus in on this week and really give it my best chance to try to play my best."

It's golf, of course, so that best chance doesn't even mean Mickelson will make it to the weekend. But Lefty is always must-see TV, even when he's crashing and burning.

This Open is shaping up to be a must see, too, hang gliders and all.

Kyle Larson, driver of the No. 5 HendrickCars.com Chevrolet, celebrates in victory lane after winning the NASCAR All-Star Race at Texas Motor Speedway on Sunday in Fort Worth, Texas.

Larson appears unstoppable at Hendrick

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Everybody knew Kyle Larson was going to win races once he started driving Rick Hendrick's cars.

JENNA FRYER

But this? This looks like a driver capable of chasing down the modern-era record of 13 wins in a season set in 1975 by Richard Petty and tied in 1998 by Larson's childhood idol Jeff Gordon.

His victory Sunday night in the All-Star race at Texas doesn't count in the win column, but it earned Larson a $1 million payout and should have sent fear through everyone else in the field. It was his third consecutive trip to victory lane, he has not finished lower than second since May 2 and there are no signs he's slowing down anytime soon.

"That is the best car I have had here; I just couldn't get close enough to him," runner-up Brad Keselowski said. "He just motored right on back by me, like damn."

And he wasn't done after Texas, either.

Larson headed straight to Ohio early Monday morning for three nights of dirt racing. Once there, he picked up his first sprint car victory of the month in the feature at Wayne County Speedway, where the payout was $6,000 to the winner.

Larson won three times in his sprint cars last month — no surprise there, Larson racked up nearly 50 victories racing coast-to-coast dirt tracks last year during his nearly season-long NASCAR suspension — and is at last meeting the hype that surrounded him when he first entered NASCAR.

Gordon and Tony Stewart were his loudest cheerleaders when Larson arrived as a 19-year-old willing to migrate from the local short track scene to the biggest show in the country. Both Hall of Famers were adamant that Larson was the purest racer they'd seen in years and were confident he'd be a superstar in NASCAR.

But his equipment at Chip Ganassi Racing wasn't good enough to win every week and Larson notched just six victories in six inconsistent seasons. He was fast at Ganassi but he didn't seem to know how to close out victories. Too many runs in contending cars ended because he'd hit a wall, make a mistake or maybe push too hard.

That hasn't been a problem since Hendrick Motorsports signed him late last year, bringing an end to his banishment from NASCAR for his use of the N-word while racing online during the early days of the pandemic. Larson's second chance came with NASCAR's winningest organization and his chance to drive Hendrick cars was going to put him in position to consistently race for wins at last.

It hasn't hurt that the entire Hendrick organization is red hot — Larson's All-Star race win was the fifth straight HMS victory, and the four-driver lineup has collected seven checkered flags in the 16 points-paying races.

Denny Hamlin holds a 47-point lead over Larson in the standings but is winless so far this year, just months removed from last year's seven-win campaign. If anyone can beat Larson right now, Hamlin doubts it is him.

In fact, he figures only Alex Bowman, William Byron and reigning Cup champion Chase Elliott can run with Larson.

"His teammates have the same cars as him, so they have the potential to get after him," Hamlin said. "That team, they've just got everything figured out right now. They've got everything you need to be fast and we're all playing catch-up at the moment.

"We're going to have to get a little bit better as the summer months go on if we want to compete with them in the long term."

Next up comes Sunday's first Cup race at Nashville Speedway, which has been dormant since its 21st and final Xfinity Series race in 2011. Larson will go to Tennessee with Valvoline making its debut on his No. 5 Chevrolet as the third of four sponsors so far announced for Larson this season.

It will be just the third time in 17 events that a non-Hendrick company has been featured on his car. But with this rate of success, companies aren't going to stay away from Larson much longer, which is what Hendrick banked on all along when he offered the exiled driver a return.

Larson understands there may be no reward at the end of the season for his success — Kevin Harvick won a Cup-high nine races last year but failed to advance to the championship round of the playoffs — but nine finishes of fourth or better have him feeling really good right now at second in the Cup standings.

"The races are hard to win and championships are even harder to win," Larson said. "This is definitely the best opportunity I've ever had to win the championship. But there's still a long season left, and other cars and teams are going to get better, and so will we.

"Just got to keep working hard, and hopefully we can have ourselves in position come October or November."

New interactive reservoir habitat map available

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Anglers can find fish habitat structure locations and more on DNR's new interactive reservoir habitat map.

Habitat structure, such as bundles of Christmas trees, rock piles and wooden platforms, improves aquatic habitat for fish by creating areas for cover, nesting, and more. The structure also attracts bait fish and provides other feeding opportunities.

The new interactive map includes project lakes, structure locations, structure types, and photos of structure types. As DNR completes habitat work in the future, information will be added to the interactive map.

The Reservoir Habitat Enhancement program, which started in 2016, improves and enhances aquatic habitat through the placement of structures, shoreline stabilization, and dredging. Thanks to the help of volunteers and local businesses, DNR has completed projects on multiple reservoirs across Indiana. Projects have ranged in size; one added more than 200 structures, with multiple structure types, to Patoka Lake in 2020. Another smaller project at Bryant Creek Lake in 2019 sank 50 Christmas trees in bundles around the lake.

DNR Indiana Department of Natural Resources

In some reservoirs, existing aquatic habitat has deteriorated, making the addition of fish habitat structures necessary to improve the fishery. Other reservoirs may have never contained quality habitat. This could be due to water quality, water level fluctuations, land use before reservoir construction, or other issues.

Learn more about the program and access the new interactive map at on.IN.gov/fishhabitat.

Individuals interested in improving fish habitat in their own private ponds or lakes can visit the BNR website for more information: wildlife.IN.gov/fishing/private-pond-and-lake-management.

Durant's sensational performance sends Nets to 3-2 semifinals lead

BY BRIAN MAHONEY
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Kevin Durant has always been one of the NBA's most unstoppable scorers.

The Brooklyn Nets needed much more than points Tuesday night, so Durant gave them one of the most spectacular performances in postseason history.

Durant had 49 points, 17 rebounds and 10 assists, sending the Nets back into the lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals with a 114-108 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks in Game 5.

"I know the perception of me is that I can score the basketball well, but any team that I've played on, I've been asked to do pretty much everything from rebounding to defending to initiating to scoring," Durant said. "I might not do it all the time but I do a little bit of everything."

In Game 5, it was a whole lot of everything.

The two-time NBA Finals MVP became the first player to have at least 45 points, 15 rebounds and 10 assists in a playoff game.

"Historic, historic performance," Nets coach Steve Nash said.

With James Harden returning but delivering little offense and Kyrie Irving out, Durant played all 48 minutes and shot 16 for 23 from the field. The four-time scoring champion had 20 points in the fourth quarter, perhaps the biggest shot a 3-pointer with 50 seconds left and the Nets protecting a one-point lead.

"The injuries that he's been through, to come back even from the Achilles to the hamstring to get back in this position, the world is witnessing, once again, who is the best player in the world," Nets forward Jeff Green said.

No argument from the Bucks.

"He's the best player in the world right now and we've got to beat him as a team," Giannis Antetokounmpo said. "We've got to guard him as a team. We've got to make him make tough shots like tonight. We've just got to keep doing our job and hopefully he's going to miss."

Harden played for the first time since leaving 43 seconds into the series opener with right hamstring tightness. He shot just 1 for 10 and missed all eight 3-pointers, but had eight assists and six rebounds while playing 46 minutes.

"I woke up and was like, 'You know what? Let's go,' " Harden said. "I tried to go out there and do the best I can. Hopefully I gave my teammates some encouragement and some life."

Game 6 is Thursday in Milwaukee, where the Bucks are 4-0 against the Nets this season.

Antetokounmpo had 34 points and 12 rebounds, while Khris Middleton added 25 points.

The Bucks had all the momentum after winning the two games in Milwaukee, with Irving spraining his ankle in the second quarter of Game 4. It appeared Durant would be the only one of the three superstars to play Tuesday — which given the way he played, may have been enough anyway.

Harden didn't appear to have full strength in his leg, leaving jumpers short and rarely beating anyone on the dribble.

Durant made sure it didn't matter.

"Special performance by him," Bucks coach Mike Budenholzer said. "Credit to him, some tough shots, so we've got to look at it, figure out getting better."

Durant's basket got it down to 42-33 before Antetokounmpo rattled in a 3-pointer and follow with two more baskets to push the lead to 16, which is where it still was when the Bucks took a 59-43 lead to the half.

The Bucks still led by 16 midway through the third quarter, answering every time the Nets seemed to have any momentum. But Durant then got hot and never really cooled off.

He made all four shots and scored 11 points in the final 6:18 of the third as the Nets pulled to 87-81 on his three-point play with 31 seconds left.

Durant kept right on going to open the fourth, with his 3-pointer with 8:36 to play making it 94-93, Brooklyn's first lead since it was 2-0.

STUDENT NEWS

Hartman awarded stipend for summer research

Madison's Madeline Elizabeth Holland, a graduate of Madison Consolidated High School, was among 104 undergraduates at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln awarded stipends to participate in research with a faculty mentor this summer.

A senior biochemistry, and nutritional science and dietetics major, Maddie will participate in the project "EAT Family Style Adaptations to the Childcare Home Setting" as part of Nebraska's Undergraduate Creative Activities and Research Experience (UCARE) Program, which supports undergraduates to work with faculty mentors in research or creative activities. Students receive a stipend of $2,400 to engage in intensive research or creative activity for 20 hours per week.

The students' projects span academic disciplines including engineering, chemistry, modern languages and literature, psychology, art and art history, architecture, special education, and fisheries and wildlife.

The students also will have opportunities to participate in the Big Ten Academic Alliance's Graduate Education Discovery Program. In August, students from the Nebraska Summer Research Program and UCARE will present posters on their research and creative activities at a virtual campus research symposium. For more about undergraduate research at Nebraska, visit https://ucare.unl.edu.

Hartman named to UA dean's List

Madison's Prezley Hartman has been named to the spring 2021 Dean's List at The University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

Hartman, a graduate of Southwestern (Hanover), made the Alabama Dean's List by posting at least a 3.5 GPA on a sale of 4.0 for the semester.

MIGHTY CUPS

Wanda Jackson Sunshine Fund board members recently donated spill-proof "Mighty Cups" to Hanover Health and Rehab's huntington's disease unit that serves 21 huntington's patients at that facility in Hanover, Indiana. Those suffering from huntington's are prone to tremors that make using a standard cup difficult to control but the Mighty Cups are designed not to tip over and therefore eliminate spills. Patients (sitting, from left) Gregory Taylor and Justin Andriot display the special cups, which are designed and engineered not to tip over, along with (standing, from left) Wanda Jackson Sunshine Fund board members Marci Auxier Jones, Wanda Jackson and Angela Wyne Jackson and Hanover Health and Rehab Center Administrator Steve Brian. The Sunshine Fund was named in honor of Jackson for her many years of service to huntington's disease families locally, regionally, statewide and nationally.

Main Street program announces 2021 award winners

Madison's Main Street program celebrated the downtown business district on Wednesday, June 9, with an awards ceremony at the non-profit's sixth annual gala and & dessert auction fundraiser.

"We were thrilled with the show of support for downtown," said Randy Lakeman, Main Street board president. "The past year has been particularly difficult for small businesses. it's great that people recognize how important Main Street businesses are to our local economy."

Mayor Bob Courtney, who gave brief remarks, noted that Madison is fortunate to be made up of longtime residents and relative newcomers. "Both segments are vital to the community's future."

Four awards were presented in recognition of special accomplishments:

The Innovation Award — for a business that opened, expanded or added new products or services during the past two years — was presented to Ralph London, owner of the Betty Jeffries women's apparel shop that opened in late 2018 and expanded with James Dell, a companion men's shop.

The Business Excellence Award — presented to a business that exemplifies excellent business practices — was presented to the Hong Kong Kitchen. The downtown restaurant, opened in 2002, not only collected donations and masks to serve people in need in China during the pandemic, but continued to serve the community with take-out service during the pandemic shut-down.

Madison's Main Street program recently honored its award winners at the organization's sixth annual gala and dessert auction. Those recognized included (from left): Business Excellence Award winner Hong Kong Kitchen represented by co-owner Judy Jiang; Innovation Award winner Ralph London; Tribute Award winner Judy George, given posthumously with family members Julie Truax and Brad Warren accepting; and Legacy Award winner Rob Houze of Crawdaddy Music.

The Tribute Award — presented to an individual or individuals who have gone "above and beyond" their regular job in service to Madison's Main Street district — was presented posthumously to Judy George, long-time owner of The Attic, for her commitment to Main Street and the community. Madison Main Street announced the renaming of this award as the Judy George Tribute Award in her memory.

The Legacy Award — presented to a business that has been in Downtown Madison for at least 25 years — presented to Rob Houze, owner of Crawdaddy Music. Crawdaddy is a destination business, drawing from many states throughout the country, as well as the Madison region. Houze is a trained professional musician whose band performs locally.

Main Street Executive Director Austin Sims said that in addition to the four main awards, the organization was also able to recognize the new businesses opening during the past year during the pandemic.

"Thanks to the strength and resilience of our existing businesses, people want to do business here," Sims said. "And we are grateful for the support of the entire community in our efforts."

Madison was one of the first three original Main Street pilot communities in the US in 1977. Madison Main Street is designated by Indiana Main Street as a nationally accredited community in the Main Street America Program. The local organization spearheads many projects to assist businesses and bring people downtown, including Music in the Park, Girls' Weekend, the Main Street Loft Tour, and others.
